Sachamero, October 15.—A large force of detectives are hunding for the men who robbet he east bound express train of over $50,000 near this city last Thursday night, and have not yet discovered a clow which will lead to the identity of the men. A sensations story came from Woodland today to the effect that Melvin Hatch, one of the A.R.II men confined in the county jail at that place, charged with murdur and train wrecking. Indi told a fellow prisoner that he knew the train was to be robbed. Detective Humo of Wells Fango's forces at once left for Woodland to interview Hatch. The detectives have sacertained that the robbers rathe locomotive up to Sixth street in the town of 'Washington, unloaded their bags of gold at that point and then turned the angine loase. Woomland, Oalo, October 15.—Deputy Sheriff Wyokoff returned late het night after a hot chase after two train robber sumpets who were seen in Woodland Sauday. He tracked the mon within a few miles of Dixon, and could find no further trace of them.

Astronta, Or., October 15.—The mammoth log raft, which was towedower the Columbia bar on Friday last, deatined for San Francisco, is believed to have met with disaster. Last night the raft was again off the mouth of the river, having been driven northward during the heavy gale of Saturday and Sauday. The Monarch, which still has the raft in tow, was unable to make any headway against the heavy sea. The raft was drifting northward like a great log, dragging the tug along. This afternoon Pilots Staples and Cordner, who brought in the bark Eiginshire and ship Eskaroni, report having passed through lundreds of drifting pless near the lightship about 6 o'cluck this morning. The Monarch has not been eighted since least night, when size had the raft in tow; but the pilots are cortain that the drifting logs are from the raft. The raft was consigned to the Southern. MILHAUN'S STATEMEN

Treated Alike by Hensley and Scott.

NUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING

The Obligations Were Claimed be on the Other Side.

When a great statesman once charac terized the remarks of a rival candi-date as "the utterances of a hare-brained chatter of irresponsible friv-olity" he must have had an indisting prescince of just such an attack as the Expositor is now making on Sheriff trott in the Rader and Milhahn cases, and the bitterness it is infusing into th campaign is strongly suggestive of "the galled jade that winces."

Charles Mullahn, who has charge of the Kohler and Frohling winery in Scandinavian colony, was interriewed by a Ravisalcan reporter yealerday with reference to certain implied tharges in the Expositor that he (Millahn), being a Democrat, is working for Sheriif Scott on the strength of unlawful favors extended him by Scott when a prisoner in the country jail. The Expoiltor's version is as follows:
"In order that The Karchelon may have a fair chance in the 'investigation,' it might inquire whether or not it is true that Oharles Millahn is the wine-naker at Kohler & Frohling's winery, northeast of town.
"Was he arrested for removing packages of brandles from the wine cellar while it was under attachment for debt due the government, taken before Judge Ross in Los Angeles, found guilty of contempt and sentenced to six months in the Freene county jail."
"Was at the sustom of the sheriff's office to allow Millahn to take vacutions at his home in Scandinavian colony, unstanded by an ollieer and without the order of any judge, court or authority? "Was he allowed to go out Saturday nights alone and spund Sandays at his home, or where he pleased?

"Did he at one time during his term of imprisonment go out and epend several days at his home on parelic, and by whose authority?"

"Has Charles Millahn, a Democrat, each that he would have to sunear Scott.

The facts, as stated by Milhahn in this interview yesterday, will not afford much a most to the Expositor, nor will not afford they avail to strengthen the cause of the parties who have spring this latest slander on Mr. Scott.

Milhan said, in comment on the above questions: "First, let me make a statement about my trouble. This where he may be defined by Koller & Frontieg. Walters and Holm bought is the result of insolvency proceedings, Up to that time it was known as the Fruit-valle winery.

From the above statement of All-ladin, and especially from the admission attributed to Smith, taken in conjunction with the prendent established by Hensley, it will be the popular vertex that the Expositor is egain making "much add about nothing," and that there are other things besides curses and chickens that some home to roost.

Something of the influence of ancient astrology is shown in the popular belief that the rising and setting of Sirius, the dog star, influes madness into the cambe race. In our medical prescriptions, too, the old superstition appears. The creamental part of the apothecary's R is none other thum the sign of Justice, under whose special care medicines. Re is none other than the sign of Jupiter, under whose special care medicines were supposed to have been placed, and our nostrums are still compounded under the symbol of Juve's protector. The letter itself—recipe, taks—and its flourish mean substantially this: "Under the good anapiece of Juve, the patron of medicine, take the following goods in the proportious set down." Some try to throw the responsibility for the symbol R back to Raphael, but the sum of avidence points to Jupiter as its patron. In America Friday is traditionally in good ropate. Not many New Yorkers have ever heard of the "Church of the Rappickrrs." In the neighborhood of Roosevelt street, where it is located, this is the familiar name of the Roman Catholic church of 8th Josephin, of which Father Vincini is the pastor. The members are Italians exclusively, inhabitants of thus densely nenglitzed district, convolutions. densely populated district roundahout densely populated district roundabout, and as some of them are requireders and have rented the lower half of the olurch for the storage of their goods the nick-mane which designates the church as the peculiar place of worship of this class came into one.

Years ago, when Boosevelt street was not so squatid and as overflawing with human beings as it is today, this church belonged to a flethedist Episcopal congregation. There were merchants, solid men of dawn lown New York, living there, and the neighborhood was eminently respectable.

COINS OF LITTLE PRACTICAL USE.

The Gold Deltar Hast No Tillity, While the Three Cent Piece Served a Purpose.

To one who has not given the subject thought it would seem that the most success coins ever issued by the United States were the silver 3 cent pieces. They were small, as thin as a sheet of meanilla paper, and before they finally disappeared from circulation they came to be regarded as unisances.

Although three is much to be said against the amorying little coing, they were, as a matter of fact, at far greatmutility, as far as circulation is concerned, than another cein. This is the gold dollar, which, experts at the subtreasury Engl, has more served any useful jurpose. Said Maurico Stahleman, eashier of the subtreasury, recently:

"From the mutilitatel condition of the gold dollars sent here for redemption it is positively shown that the public donof regard them as coins. Their only use appears to be for brendes, necklanes, watch charms, scarfpins and the like. It is doubtful if one in a thousand ever really passed in circulation.

"With the 3 cent silver piece it was afforent. When like to coined, the country bud nothing in the shape of a coin between the large expery cents and half conts and the silver half dime. The small coin was halfled as a blessing and hexame popular at caree. There was an excellent reason for its issue also.

"Strange as it may seem, it was not provided for by a coinage act, but by an act revising the postal rates. This lave lowered the cust for transmitting the unit of weight for letters from 5 to 3 cents. It was deemed advisable by congress thereingen to issue a calm of corresponding demonination. A vonman of Carrelton, Ky., thought that she would be able to stop a leak in the bettom of an iron pat by driving a piece of lead into it. Su she got one of her husband's pistol cartridges out of a drawer and began the driving precess with a hammer. Now, the good lady didn't understand the philosophy of a cartridge and never dreamed that it would a spice from the concussion of a hammer, seeing no powder about the thing. But there is no knowledge as FRESNO'S LEADING RESORT / EDWARD SCHWARZ ning. But them is no knowledge as Lat which comes from experience, al-though the price paid in that way is sometimes very high. This cartridge exploited, and the flesh of the thumb and flager with which she held it was considerably torn. And that old pot still leaks as it did before—Louisville Courier-Jonean. "Republicans believe in the American system of government, because it is a governmet of the people. They believe in the purity of American home life, in American free schools, and in American freedom. In a word, the Republican party is for America and all that is American. Above all, we would give to American lador steady work and good wages. If this makes ours a paternal government, we thank God we have just such a government."—M. M. ESTEE.

I had a good horse, Tophet, black as a coal, all raw bones and joint and a reach like a moose. His legs worked like piston rods. But, as I said, I did not know where to go or whot to do. So we used to tit the post loading, in the daytime watching the plains, all panting for travelers, like a young bride waiting her husband for the first time."

ike a years heride waiting her hashand for the first time."

Macerus regarded Pierre with rich delight. He had an unctuous spirit, end his heart was soft for worten, a carithat he never bad one on his conscience, though he had brushed gay smiles off the lips of many with his own. But that was an amiable weakness in a strong man. "Aw, Pierre," he said coaxingly, "kape it down, niey, aisy me heart's gon like a triphamarer at thoughtavit. Aw, vis; aw, vis, Pierre." "Well, it was like that to me—all son and a sweet string in the air, at night to sit mid tell tales and such things, and prinage a little beyond brandy, a look at the stars, a half hour with the cattle—the same old game. Of course there was the wife of Hillon, the factor—fine, always fine to sae, but does and mid. We were good friends, Ida and nea. I had a hand in het wedding. Holy, I knew her when she was a little girl! We could talk togother wisted in a by signs. She was a good woman—she had never guessed at ceil. She was quick too, like a flash, to road and understand without words. A face was a book to her." Yery good! One afterneou we were frow. We had to wait an hour. Then Hilton's wife beckened to us. We went inside. The girl was asleep. There was something in the touch of Hilton's wife like sleep itself, like music. It was her voice, that touch. Sin could not speak with her tourne, but her bands and face were language and music. Bien, there was the girl askeep, all clear of dust and stain, and that fine hand. It lay loose on her breast, so quiet, so quiet. Eafin, the real story, for how she hy there does not matter, but still it was good to see when we know the story.

The trapper was langthing silently to himself to hear Pierre in his romanife mood. A weman's hand—it was the game for a boy, not an adventurer, for the trapper's only creed was that women were like there-spoils for the hunter. Pierro saw it, but he was above petty anger. He merely said:

"If a man have an eye to see behind the face, he understands the foolish laugh of a man or the hand of a good woman. That is much. Se Hilton's wife told us all. She had ridden 206 miles from the southwost and was making for Fort Micach, 60 miles farther north. For what? She had loved a man against the will of the people. There had been a feud, and Garrian—that was the lover's name—was the last on his own side. There was trouble at a Hadam pay company's post, and Garrison shot a half breed. Men say he was right to a hait breed. Men say be was right to shoot him, for soman's mane must be safe up here. Besides the half breed drow first. Well, charrison was tried and must go to jull for a year. At the end of that time he would be free. The girl, Janie, knew the day. Ward had some to her. She made everything ready. She knew her brothers were watching—her three brothers und two other men who had tried to get her love. She knew also that the five would carry on the foud against the one man. So one night she took the best heres on the ranch and started away toward Fort Micab.

Micab.

"Alors, you know how she got there, after two days' hand viding, enough to isil a man, and over 50 yet to do. She was sure her brethers were on her track. But if she could get to Fort Micah and be married to Garrison before they came she wanted no more. There were only two horses of use at Hillion's post them—all the rest were away or not fit for hard travel. There was my Tophet and a lean clustrate with a long propelling gat and not an onnee of locas skin on him. There was not one way—the girl must get there. Allons, what is the good? What is life without thesa things? The girl loves the man. She must have him in spite of all. There was not pill for the good? What is life without thesa things? The girl loves the man. She must have him in spite of all. There was only Hilton and his wife and me at the post, and Hilton was lame from a fall, and one arm in a sing. If the brothers followed, well, Hilton could not interfere, be wea a company's man, but for myself, as I said, I was hungry for adventure. I had an ache in my blood for something. I was tingling to my tose; my heart was thumping in my threat. All the cords of my logs were straightening, like I was in the saddle."

Price sat up. It seemed absurd for him to speak as one who could be het and shivering with excitement, for his merements were always quiet mid procises as a hammer. But in his eyes there was a furnace barring, and his small, from land canght the air with a snap. Meavoy had seen Pierro when dangers crowded around them both, and be knew that the little man was worth three of himself, in spite of his own great height. For the others, they did not know, and if they had lived with Pierro all their lives they would never have understoad him.

"Aw, Pierre!" said Macavoy admiringly. "Aw, the sale in yer blood—that's lit! Aw, yis, yis, an yer thighs all bendin like wire, an the prairie beyant, an the had be here the heart beat up blo the swell of a tide! "Very good! One afternoon we were all standing outside the rest when we saw some one ride over the Long Divide. It was good for the eyes, I cannot tell quile how. But horse and rider were so sharp and clear cut against the sky sharp and clear cut against the sky. They pressed for a moment on the top of the divide, and it seemed like a mossinger out of the strange country at the farthest north, the place of legends. But of course it was only a traveler like ourselves, for in a half laught that they had come? A little was constructed in the stranger of the sharp and the stranger of the sharp and the stranger like ourselves, for in a half laught that they had come? A little was constructed like a most freeze of legends. But of course it was only a traveler like ourselves, for in a half laught that they had come? A little was cond of horses without and then a was like ourselves, for in a ladf laught that they had come? A little was like did not try to hide it. Sha had dressed so for case. man's heart texp in his month—II not was like Macrovor or the picous Mowley. Pierre's last three words had a touch of irony, for he knew that the trapper had a precious tengane for Beriptine when a missionary peased that way and a bad name with women to give the point. Mowley smilled sourly, but Mice way langhed outright and smacked his live on the bench, learning upon the other of the bench, learning upon the other of the bench, learning in the bench, learning in the other of the bench, learning in the other of the bench, learning in the bench, learning in the bench, learning in the bench is so stiff that she could hurdly getfrom her horse, and the horse, ton was from her horse, and the horse, ton was from her legs like a main's clellus and a peaked on, with a pisted in ler belt. Her eyes had a banded look, and her ness breached on ther hands.

"What would women of that sort doe that on the wild would now, when she saw Hillon's wife, a error hand. "Of course you will understand how I did it. I dispard aband on his mouth, put a pistol at his head, gagged and ited him. Then I got my Tophet, and away I went to the spring. The girriwas waiting. There were few words. I pripped her hand, gave her another pistol, and then we got away on a fine mouthit trail. We had not goon a mile when I heard a faint yell far behind My game had been found out. There was nothing to do but to ridefor itnow, and to fight, it necessary. But fighting was not good, for I might be killed, and was not good, for I might be killed, and then the girl would be caught just the horsea nock and neck, their feet pounds with the farm burning was not good, for I might be killed, and the many by red to me-such a ride—the horsea nock and neck, their feet pounds with the farm burning to the more another many by the same. liko that, with 10 minuter rest and now and then at a spring, or to strotch our legs. We hardly spoke to each other, but God of love, my heart was warm to this girl, who had ridden 160 miles in 124 hones. Just before dawn, when I was beginning to think that we should easily win the race if thin girl could but hold out, if it did not kill her, the chest-nut stock a leg into the crack of the prairic, and horse and girl were on the ground together. Bise could scarcely more, she was so weak, and her face was like death. I put a pistol to the liko that, with 10 minu ground together. Blee could searcely move, she was so weak, and her face was like death. I put a pistol to the chestant's head and called it. At that the girl steeped and bissed the pour beast's neek, but spake nothing. As I helped her out my Tophut I put my lips to the sleeve of her dress. Mother of God, what could a man do, she was so noble!

Goll, what could a man do, she was so mobile!

''Dawn was just breaking cozy and gray at the swell of the prairie over the Jumping Sand bills. They hay quiet and shining in the green brown plain, but I knew that beneath there was a churn which could set these swells of sand in notion and make deadly sport of an army. Who can tell what it is? A flood under the surface, a tidal river—what No man knows. But they are sea mensters on the hund. Every morning at sourise they begin to eddy and roll, and no man ever saw a stranger sight. Bien, I looked back. There were four horsemen coming on about three miles away. What was there to do? The girl and myself on my tired horse were too much. They saw also and hurried on. There canne to me a great idea. I must reach and cross the Jumping Sand kills before sunrise. It was all a deadly chance.

"When we got to the edge of the sand, they were almost a mile behind. I was all sick to my teeth as my peer Tophet stepped into the sand. God, how I watched the dawn! Slow, slow we toiled over that velvet powder. As we reached the farther side I felt that it I watched the dawn! Slow, slow wo toiled over that velvet powder. As we reached the farther side! I felt that it was beginning to move. The san was showing live the lid of an eye doug the plain. I looked back. All four horsenner were in the sand, plunging on toward us. By the time we looked the brown green prairio on the farther side the sand was rolling behind us. The girl and not looked back. She ecened too dazed. I jumped from the horse and told her that she must push en alone to the fort; that Tophet could not early both; that I should be in rodanger. She looked at me, I cannot tell how, then stooped and kiesed me between the cycs. I have never fornotten. I struck Tophet, and how was gone to her happiness, for she reached the fort and her lover's arms.

"But I stood looking look upon the Jumping Sand bills. So was there ever a sight like that—these hills gone like a melting floor, the sunrise spotting it with rose and yellow and three hores and their raders fighting what cannot be fought. What could I day Tay would have got the girl if I had not led them across, and five would have killed me if they could. Only one cried out, and then but once, in a long shriek. But after all three was quiet as they fought until they were gone where no man could see, where none cries out so we can hear."

There was a long pause, painful to lear. The trader sat with eyes fixed man to the ear."

There was a long passe, painful to bear. The trader eat with eyes fixed humbly as a dog's on Pierre. At last Macavoy said: "She lissed ye, Pierro—aw, yis, she fild that Jast betuna the eyes. Do yes liver see her now, Pierre?"

But Pierre, though loaking at him, made no answer.—Gilbert Parker.

SARCEY'S FAMOUS DUEL.

The Noted Parisian Critic's five Story of the Encounter.

The Noted Partsin Critics Gwas Mory of the Encounter.

At this moment appears a gentleman whom all Paris knows and almost all Parisinos adore—namely. Francisquo Sarcey. Knowing himself to be among friends, he talked freely. For half a century nearly our great critic has held the pen, at first limith, and now he wields it with unquestioned authority. Like most Parisian celekrities, he was born in the provinces, at Dourdan, where his father kept a school after the fall of the first Napoleon discoled the army in which the elder Survey had instant on ensightedness, transmitted to his soft. There Survey's pacents toiled with varying fartures, and the new Francisque took his hight for Paris and walked firmly in the foolprints of the late Julea.

continues, and thence Prameisque took his flight for Paris and walked fruily in the featprints of the late Julea Julea Julea, who also devoted his life to dramatic criticism. He makes am idea for the drama. He lives for his work. He respectfully considers Granatic criticism an art and not a trade, and perimps for that reason is the greatest critical methority in France. He told us of his duck with Heebert Persand, the musical critic and comic open compacer, who is a very charming man, by the way. Survey, in 1866, wrote a scattling attack and Grardin's paper. La Liberte. Emillo the Girardin objected on principle to duck, so the chitorial staff, considering their literary style insuited by Survey, style lots us to who would call him and and kill him if possible. The lot fell on Pesard. Now, Pessard and Surcey were great friends, but it was necessary to obey the call of honor, so Pessard seat the challenge, which Sarcey accepted with dignity. The adversaries took off their conts and vest and faced each other, swords in hand, when, lof the four seconds took to squabbling over some detail. The dispute way long and ferced cont, and the two notrevaries fell into sonversation, sword in hand.

Quoth Pessard and frace. Would you mint if I put on my cont?

Quoth Pessnil—I am moch you mind if I put on my cast? Surrecy—A good idea. We can kill each other later. Pessnil—Let me tell you, my dear Sarcoy, how greatly I admire your talent.

Sarcoy—I can say the same to you, but why are we going to kill each other?

Pessard—I don't quite know. It seems you grossly insulted me, and if I do not succeed in killing you that you must certainly slay me in explation.

Sarcey (meditatively—I do not remember having insulted you, but if you must be to the property of the pr

Sarcey (meditatively)—I do not be member having insulted yon, but if you say so I suppear it is true.

In the meantime the four seconds were quarreling furtously. One gentleman was shaking his flat in his opponent's face and mother was brandishing his riding whip, whereupon Sarcey caddealy barst cut laughing and said: "Cante, Prs. and, let us separate our records, and then, instead of enting each other's throats, we will go and have some breakfast."

Which was no somer said than done, and the two dualists have been fast friends ever since,—Paris Letter in Philadolphia Telegraph.

Unfair Promises.

A well-attended meeting was held in the courthouse park last evening under the duplice of the Ropublican Central Club. The speaker of the evening was the Hon. J. O. Daly of Ventura, a mem-ber of the state executive committee. George Jones introduced Judge Daly in a few appropriate assets.

n a few appropriate remarke. Judge Daly is a filent, easy speaker, and has a way of putting difficult political propositions and statistical details in col propositions and statistical newscars a plain, colloquial style, which he used est night with the happiest effect.

He discussed the policies of the different parties. There are three which may be said to be political parties; the fourth—or Prohibitionist—is a moral party. It is incumbant on all to recognize that the questions before the countries.

nize that the questions before the country today are more important than those which were in despute before the civil war. The Republican party is asking the people today to repudiate the Democratic party, to strike down the fallacy of free trade. [Applaince.] The policy of this country should be considered without reference to any nation on the earth. There is no fear of the United States being injured by the armed forces of any country, or all of them together, but it may be that our country may be subjected to the policy of a foreign power, and thus as absolutely and completely conquered as if by armed force. Great Britain is endeavoring to build up a monopoly to crush every nation on carth.

The speaker caused a ripple of laugher by connecting the Popullate and Democrate with a fraternal line. He

The speaker caused a ripple of laugher by connecting the Foulists and Democrats with a fraternal link. Attempted Robbery.
Yesterday morning, at about 1 30, two men unsuccessfully attempted to rob G.
C. Lursen who was returning from Chinatown. Largen had been having a glorious time, and still had $120 when he earthed back across the railroad. Two thugs in Chinatown had seen him erhibit some of his money, and they followed him. There was a freight train standing at the depot, and just as Larsen got on the coupling in passing between the area one of the would-be too-berg grabbed his coat-tail. There was a freight train standing at the depot, and just as Larsen got on the coupling in passing between the area one of the would-be too-berg grabbed his coat-tail. There was a fierce tag of war, but finally the cost gave way. Larsen immediately got down and called Officer Auderson who was near by. The officer rushed over on the other sille of the train and arretted the villains, one of whom still held the coat tail in his hand.

The Growers Want the Names of Firms Who Cut Prices.

Entror Requisition:—The reasons given by the constitutionally crooked packer for cutting raisin prices is that he has to compete with the Spaniard believes there is some value in raising and reliated to some value in raising and reliated to the New York cantom home a will the California raising and reliated to the New York cantom home a will be seen troller of the New York cantom home a will be seen to the New York cantom home a will be seen to the New York cantom home a will be seen to seel at anything like the prices in the California raising are differed.

I have lately received from the controller of the New York cantom home a wall that the California raising are circly years and the spinial raising for circly years are additionally rotating until June 90, 1894, and for the year closing then the imports of Spanial raising for circly years were 18,000,000 pounds. As to the combine. If there had been no combination prices would have been cut this year as they were last, when a constitutionally croaked packer troke the market by offering in all castorn cities raising at prices which allow the grower only I cont a pound.

As to the charges made against the combination by the Producera' l'auking Company, I consider their weak point to be that they are afraid to mention names.
